

RUSS TRICK GERMANS ON BIG RETREAT

BRILLIANT CAVALRY RAIDS ON FLEEING FLANKS DO DAM.
AGE, BUT STRATEGY OF RUSS WINS.

WAR ON SERBIA OPENS

Germany Starts Titanic Campaign
With Constantinople and Serbia Ob-literation As Goals.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

London, Sept. 21.—The latest reports from the Vilna fighting zone indicate the Russian army has escaped the circle which Field Marshal Von Hindenburg threw about it. By cavalry raids, as brilliant as the famous coups of Stuart and Sheridan in the American Civil war, a screen of German horsemen swarmed about the flanks of the retreating Russians and stood astride their main line of communication. It now appears to be probable, however, that the encroaching forces are too weak to impede General Ruzsky's veterans.

The simultaneous movement by Prince Leopold, Field Marshal Von Mackensen, have not resulted in complete advance, especially by the latter, who has not been able to link his scattered troops after their march through the Prripet marshes.

Escape Means Much.

If it be true that the defenders of Vilna have escaped, Russia has cause to draw a deep breath of relief, for it is apparent that the catastrophic situation of the military was changed for the moment and that Gen. Ruzsky's troops remained in Vilna so long that Field Marshal Von Hindenburg's plans for a junction of his wings secured, for a time, certain success. North of Lida the railway in German hands, but the main forces of the Russians are south of that point.

Inter Troubles Vague.

The domestic situation in Russia owing to the strict censorship, is still a matter of mystery. When the Drama was protracted, numerous strikes were declared. In many cases the men are still out. Others returned to work only as the stoppage was in the nature of a protest no longer continued trouble is expected.

The Zemstvo conferences at Moscow this week will furnish agreement in the national crisis with the Duma majority and will likely urge upon the highest authorities the necessity of appointing a ministry trusted by the people.

Crush Serbia Next.

The long expected offensive against Serbia is said to have begun with a series of military fits, designed to cover crossings of the Danube and Save. The Turks evidently expect to push a way toward Constantinople, along the road opened by the crusaders.

At the other front, nothing new is developed except growing interest of the German reply to the allied artillery on the western line.

BRITISH TRANSPORT FROM EGYPT SUNK?

Reported in Germany That a Submarine Has Sent Down British Troop Ship Bound for Dardanelles.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

Vienna, wireless to Sayville, Sept. 21.—The Frankfurter Zeitung reports that a large British transport from Egypt for the Dardanelles has been sunk by a German submarine.

Russ Sink Submarine.

Berlin, via London, Sept. 21.—Russia has sunk a German submarine which has been operating recently in the Black Sea.

British Ship Destroyed.

London, Sept. 21.—The British liner Linkmore, 4,628 tons, has been sunk. Her crew was landed.

Find Submarine Bases.

New York, Sept. 21.—Substantial rumors that German submarine bases had been established in English waters, was brought here today by Frank S. Peir of Ithaca, New York, a cattle breeder, who owns a breeding place on the Isle of Guernsey.

He said the British were trapping submarines by means of steel nets and he knew personally of twenty-four that had been thus captured during a five months' stay on the Isle.

BRITISH AEROPLANE WRECKED BY GERMAN

English Pilot Killed and Observer
Captured in Air Fight at St.
Quentin.

Berlin, Sept. 20.—The official announcement from the war office under date of September 20, says:

"West of St. Quentin a British aeroplane was shot down by a German fighter. The British pilot was killed and the observer captured."

The foregoing did not appear in yesterday's official German statement as received by way of London and it apparently was struck out by British censor.

BURIED ALIVE IN DUG-OUT

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

Muskegon, Sept. 21.—The lifeless body of Wm. Carlson, eleven year old boy of Norway, Michigan, was recovered yesterday from a dugout on a farm near that city. An old stump had been shattered by blasting, leaving quite a hole. Carlson and other boys by more digging then fashioned a cave. On his way home the boy had entered the cave, and while in there the ground gave way, covering him. He had part of his visor of his head protected when visitors had recovered him, and his body soon was recovered, but was lifeless.

Formerly Jute Sacks Contained Sand

High-Toned Now.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

Amsterdam, Sept. 21.—The Germans in Belgium are making trench sand bags of silk and velvet, according to the Telegraph correspondent at Roulers. The supply of jute has been exhausted.

The correspondent said, the graveyard at Roulers in which the German dead are buried, has been enlarged three times. The wounded arrive there in continuous streams.

WEST INDIES RAISE ARMY FOR ENGLAND

British Possessions in Caribbean Sea
Will Have Ready Regimental
Unit to Go to Front.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

Kingsland, Jamaica, Sept. 21.—Reports from Jamaica and other West Indian possessions of the British empire indicate that a sufficient number unit will be ready to sail for England soon, although no definite word has been given as to when the call for men will be made. Already hundreds of the pick of West Indian youths have volunteered and at their own cost and charge have found their way to England to offer themselves as recruits for Kitchener's army, and even greater numbers have enlisted in the various Canadian contingents which have gone or are going to the front.

Meanwhile, conservative factions in politics headed by Governor Philipp are looking on with much amusement to the differences in the progressive camp. Governor Philipp is planning to capture a conservative delegation to the national convention. His name during the last few days has been prominently mentioned as a possibility for vice-president. The La Follette campaign is over again.

Emery for Governor?

Out of power it is natural that the progressives must make the first play on the political chess board and the conservatives are doing much speculating as to whom the progressives will run for governor. Into the discussion during the past few days has come the name of J. Q. Emery, former dairy and food commissioner and one of the best known politicians in the state.

All the British colonies in the West Indies have voluntarily subscribed money or supplies to meet the empire's needs—for the purchase of aeroplanes, machine guns, and for incidentals such as smoking supplies for the men in the trenches. In the case of Jamaica the government voted a sum of $150,000 which was used to send a cargo of sugar to the mother country while by public subscription funds have been collected to the sum of $200,000 for other objects. In a country where the average earnings of 75 per cent of the population is not more than $120 a year, and where citizens of opulence are scarce, it is declared that the island's showing has been a remarkably patriotic one.

Nuneaton, Eng., Sept. 21.—Several hundred miners are entombed in an English colliery as a result of fire. The cage employed to bring workmen to the surface was destroyed by the flames. Rescuers already have sent up ten bodies.

Case Dismissed.

Westport, Conn., Sept. 21.—Mrs. Keturah Tuttle, aged forty-five, of Hoboken, New Jersey, supreme marshal of the Lady Foresters of America, in national convention at Bridgeport, Conn., died here today on a trolley car while bound from Norwalk to Bridgeport to attend the convention.

Case Dismissed: Judge H. L. Maxfield this morning dismissed the state case against Matt Bradley, charged with second offense drunkenness, when Attorney John Cunningham appeared for the defendant in the court. Bradley was supposed to have had his preliminary examination today, but the court saw fit to dismiss the case without further prosecution. State Superintendent Cary presided.

TWO PROGRESSIVE FACTIONS AT ODDS; PHILIPP MEN SMILE

Breach Between La Follette and Mc-Govern Grows Wider as Political Pot Continues Boiling.

[ESPECIAL TO THIS GAZETTE]

Madison, Wis., Sept. 21.—The La Follette people are planning on a clean progressive slate with no compromises was indicated by the statements in both the La Follette and McGovern political circles here today.

The overtures of the past two weeks to bring these two progressive factions together with the hope that a compromise slate could be agreed upon has come to naught. Senator La Follette's closest political advisors are still persistent against compromise and the attitude of former Governor McGovern has changed radically in the past few days. Asked if he intended to take the stump for La Follette in his senatorial campaign, Mr. McGovern said that he could see no reason why he should and pointed out that La Follette had taken no interest in (McGovern's) senatorial

La Follette to Take Stump.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

"It will take me two weeks to completely untangle the work of the last session of the legislature," was the only comment Senator La Follette would make on political subjects today. "I'll be on the stump this fall and let the people know what has been happening in this state."

Meanwhile, conservative factions in politics headed by Governor Philipp are looking on with much amusement to the differences in the progressive camp. Governor Philipp is planning to capture a conservative delegation to the national convention. His name during the last few days has been prominently mentioned as a possibility for vice-president. The La Follette campaign is over again.

M'KENNA ESTIMATES BRITISH WAR DEBT AT ELEVEN BILLION

English Revenue Will Amount to Scarcely One-Eighth of Enormous War Expenses.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

London, Sept. 21.—Reginald Mc-

Kenna of the exchequer in his budget speech today estimated that the government revenue for the current year would be $27,000,000 pounds ($1, $35,000,000), and that the expenditure would reach 1,590,000,000 pounds ($7, $35,000,000), and that the dead weight of debt at the close of the financial year would be $1,200,000,000 pounds ($11, $35,000,000).

Mr. McGovern proposed an addition of 40 per cent to existing income tax and taxation of all incomes of $130 pounds ($350) or more.

Premier Asquith informed the house that the figure he gave not include any forces raised outside the United Kingdom.

The British forces since the commencement of war has been swelled not only by recruiting in the United Kingdom but by important detachments from Canada, Australia, New Zealand and India. No figures are available, however, showing total contributions in men of these various

British possessions.

TO MAKE THIS CITY HIS HEADQUARTERS

Reverend G. W. Emerson, State
Organizer for United Brethren Church, Will Reside in Janesville.

Because of the excellent railroad facilities which Janesville offers, the Reverend G. W. Emerson, newly appointed conference evangelist and state organizer for the United Brethren church in Wisconsin, is moving to this city with his family and will make his home at 416 Milton avenue.
Mr. Emerson was formerly pastor at Richland Center where he was eminently successful in building up a church and paying for a new church edifice costing $20,000. He increased the membership in the denomination from 150 to 500 during his pasto-
racy at Richland Center. Mr. Emerson received his appointment as state organizer at the recent convention of the organization at Richland Center.
Reverend G. J. Roberts, conference superintendent of the denomination, was reappointed to the position and will continue to make his home in Janesville. Reverend James Robinson, pastor of the local United Brethren church, was returned to this charge.

Safety First

C. & N. W. R. R.
Stanley Sylvester Garbutt, and James Stocks spent Saturday and Sunday in Chicago.

F. L. Hinessey of Chicago, former storekeeper here spent Sunday in this city.

The local safety committee met yesterday morning and made out the monthly reports. There has been no serious accidents in the local yards so far this month.

A new stationary engine will be installed in the local shops.

The Chicago and Northwestern Railroad is in the market for 500 ore cars.

C. M. & St. P. R. R.
The Chicago, Milwaukee and Saint
Paul Railroad on September 15 added an observation car service to all its through trains between Chicago and the Pacific Coast.

P. C. Elder, general superintendent, and N. F. Thurber, division superintendent, passed through here last week on their way to inspect the washouts on the Mineral Point division.

Forty more men were sent out on the Albany, New Glarus branch to help repair the washouts. A gang of eighty-six men are now employed on that branch.

GUARDING LOW BRIDGES TO PROTECT BRAKEMEN

A railroad maintained standard
"trestles" at a proper distance on each side of a low bridge. The bridge gave about three feet headway above the cars. A brakeman was killed by striking his head against the bridge.
In an action for his death the New Jersey Court of Errors and Appeals holds that railroad is not chargeable with negligence as regards brakemen on freight cars, in failing to insure a night or low bridge over its tracks, in the absence of proof that such a provision was customary in railroad practice (Raub v. Lehigh Valley, N. J., 94 Atl., 567).

Crossing Accident.

Employees, seeing a person standing on one side of the track at a crossing, in a place not safe, are not negligent, says Oklahoma Supreme Court.
In assuming that he will remain in that place of safety, and not heedlessly run upon the track in front of moving cars. If he does so, and it is impossible to stop the train in time to avoid killing him, the company cannot be held liable for his death. In such circumstances failure to ring the bell and sound the whistle on approaching the crossing would not make the company liable for such failure would not be in any way responsible for the deceased's going on the track (St.
Louis, I. M. & S. v. Gibson, Okla., 150
Pac., 465).

Kurds, Bullies of Asia Minor, Busy Killing Armenian Christians

Washington, D. C., Sept. 21.—The Kurds, who report says, are again engaged in their favorite occupation of slaying Armenians, men, women, and children, are described in the war primer issued by the National Geographic Society today:

The Kurds are a survival from the days when prospecting men lived on, or, at least, principally, by the sword. Their wild tribes are scattered throughout Asia Minor, acting to thwart the modest efforts of the land toward modern comfort, security and organization. Although once fabulously rich, the country has not been able to bring forth the sufficiency of wealth to pay the rent that the Kurds have exacted their untamed hosts, keeping here, a housekeeping that has culminated in abandoning the summer pastures for the winter cottage, after primaries of killing the owner and his family, and then replenishing of small stores at the point of rifle, a transaction usually followed by the burning of the loaded shops.

The Kurd is a picturesque citizen, and when he is not engaged in savage matters in Turkey are indefinitely more in evidence than the Armenians and other peoples amongst whom he lives. The Kurd is the traveler's first impression in Asia Minor, and, in most cases, he remains the predominant one. The Kurds wear clothes of vivid colors; poorer ones, of the most reckless nonchalance. The Kurds ride the best horses they are also armed, nearly all the Armenians and travelers, and the overlord Turks themselves.

The Turks have been unable to get a complete mastery over their subject Kurds, and have employed an administrative policy toward them of letting them alone. Thus, the Kurd massacred Armenians, robs Armenians, travelers, and traders, notwithstanding these compatriots his right, in a useful state, the Kurd lives in the hills and herds sheep. He is a pastoral soul-dweller in the summer. In the winter, he moves to the Mesopotamian plains, and either lives in his tent or is owned out of a semi-homesteaded house. His tent is of black, tattered cloth, quilts and cooking pots. His children go naked and his women ragged. His board is set with sour milk, and when by chance he builds a winter house, it consists of hole in the ground with a flat roof, but no whole room, at a prairie dog's dwelling. Within it is light and airy as a low-level coal mine.

HUNTERS BEMOANING NEW GAME LAW REGARDS THE SERVING OF MEATS

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE]

Manitowoc, Wis., Sept. 21.—Hunters in this region are bemoaning the enforcement of the law recently passed by the legislature which prohibits any club or restaurant from serving the meat of a deer or a wild bird. For years it has been the custom of local nimrods to sell their game birds, deer, etc., to a number of dealers and feast their friends on their return. To make things worse, the hunters cannot even buy the meat of a deer while in the woods and receive the plaudits of their friends on their return.

Old residents say Mrs. Heimer has caught more fish in her time than any other single fisherman or woman on the Great Lakes. Some days she lands so many fine prizes that her grand-children have to help lug them home.

SENATORIAL INTERFERENCE.

Senator Robt. M. La Follette and Senator J. Ham Lewis have assumed the roll of dictators and expert advisors on the foreign loan now being negotiated in this country. The Wisconsin senator is troubled with a "violation of neutrality" bug which is about as visionary as could be imagined. His attitude looks very much like a play for votes and popularity, but it won't win.

Senator Lewis files objection from a financial standpoint. To his distorted vision the loan means distress at home and possibly bankruptcy. The ignorance displayed would seem surprising from any other source. The Wall Street Journal thus sums it up:

"It is no longer thought necessary that a United States Senator be a banker, or even a capitalist. But with the Federal Reserve law, a good one, on the books and a competent Federal Reserve Board in office, some senators still think it necessary on occasion to play the expert in finance. So Senator Lewis of Illinois writes to Secretary McAdoo about the proposed credit to Great Britain and France in this vein:

"If the billion sought goes to the foreign bankers, one-half of all available cash for America is taken from the American people. * * * The effect of this foreign loan would be to take $100,000,000 from our people of their own money and lend it to nations who are spending $15,000,000 a day. In sixty days all that money will be spent by the foreign nations, and we will have in its place securities of two or three countries issued upon a credit already taxed beyond their resources, and we will have no way left by law to collect the collateral."

"Only because the abundant errors in Senator Lewis' reasoning may not be everywhere detected it is worth while to point out how far he is from understanding what is going on. The foreign credit will not take a dollar out of this country. The object is to redress the balance of exchange which is now so much against Europe as to make it practically impossible for foreign purchasers to buy in this country anything they can get elsewhere or do without."

"That object can be accomplished only by allowing the proceeds of the credit to remain in this country, to be applied upon commercial debts already incurred and to be incurred."

"Stripped of confusing technicalities, the meaning of the credit is that the United States agrees to sell to great Britain and France commodities other than war munitions to the amount of $500,000,000 or more, and to wait four or five years for payment, meanwhile collecting interest at something like 5 per cent. Admittedly, the banks and investors of the United States will be called upon to finance the farmers and manufacturers who produce the $500,000,000 of commodities sold, for which purpose ample capital and credit facilities are at hand."

"Almost certainly the money will not be spent in sixty days. Whatever the period, the operation will not displace any American money. We shall send the wheat, corn, oats, cotton, clothing and what not abroad, and in its place we hold 5 per cent English and French government obligations. Senator Lewis thinks that those governments are likely to repudiate him if he is entitled to protest. He cannot find any other grounds for opposition."

HOW NOT TO ADVERTISE.

A brother publisher from the state of New York, speaking at a recent newspaper men's convention, gave this illustration of "How Not to Advertise":

He said that after much effort he once received a small advertising contract from a man in the repair business. This man made a specialty of repairing lawn-mowers and sharpening skates, in the respective seasons for these articles. In the summer he would include in his space the notice, "Lawn mowers sharpened." He would often forget all about the ad, and let it stand unchanged until the middle of winter when the grass had long been snow covered. He would finally note that this looked queer, and would substitute "Skates sharpened" for the lawn mowers. This also he would forget and would leave it there until July when the boys went in swimming in the warm water and so on. The man complained that the public were not much interested in his advertising. No wonder.

This incident is not so very exceptional and it illustrates how little pains many advertisers take to interest the public in their inducements.

For the past few months, since the three billion dollar second British war loan was floated, there have been few government loans made, except one of about $200,000,000 by Italy and smaller ones by a few other countries. Germany, however, is receiving subscriptions on her third war loan, which was authorized by the Reichstag to the amount of $2,500,000,000. Subscriptions for this loan will close on October 18, when the first payment is due. This brings the credits granted by the Reichstag up to $7,500,000,000, and if the loan is fully subscribed, Germany's borrowings since the beginning of the war will have reached approximately six billion dollars. It is the easiest thing in the world to borrow, when credit is good, but there always comes a pay day.

Russia has recently placed with three New England manufacturers an order for 3,000,000 pairs of boots valued at five dollars a pair. If the Russian government will furnish its army with arms and munitions, the long retreat marches might be obviated, and boots would not be in such active demand. The ill-fated nation is now talking about increasing its army with 8,000,000 new men, while she has more soldiers now than can be armed and cared for. There is something lacking in Russian management.

Ex-President Taft criticizes severely our Philippine policy, and says that the country will soon be on a par with Mexico. The islands are not capable of self-government, and that is what a democratic administration has given them. The best remedy is to turn the incompetent administration out.

Colonel Roosevelt is hunting big game up in Canada, while his emissaries are hunting for votes in the western states, which hold presidential primaries next year. The colonel is a busy man and will bear watching.

The continued wet weather makes discouraging for corn contest boys, but they are all in the same boat, and many of them will be agreeably surprised when the crop is harvested.

The high water, or something else, has affected the fishing, and experience has exploded the theory that a rainy day was made for angling. The best time to fish is when they bite.

James J. Hill, the railway magnate, is seventy-seven years old. He is now in New York in consultation with the great financiers of three countries. May he live to be one hundred. The country needs such men.

INCREASE IN RECRUITS
PLEASES AUSTRALIA;
OVER HUNDRED THOUSAND

BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.

Melbourne, Australia, Sept. 21.—The recent appeal from the British War Office for more soldiers has been met with such an increase in recruiting that the Australian government will double the October and November reinforcements, making them 16,260 for each of those months, instead of 8,623, the usual monthly quota. It will also be possible to send to the front in November a complete brigade of infantry, and this offer has been accepted by the Imperial authorities.

When the troops now ready for the front have embarked Australia will have dispatched 80,000 men to the front and have to her credit 30,000 more men who have enlisted for Imperial service—a total of 100,000 men.

The movement of the larger quotas of troops this fall will require greatly increased transportation facilities, problem to which the newly created minister for the navy, Jens A. Jensen, is devoting his attention. Some of the largest and newest vessels in Australia have been taken over by the government, until now there are 55 steamers under the control of the naval transport department. Mr. Jensen claims that the Australian mercantile marine, including trooperships, is the third largest in the world.

WILL CONFER WITH STREET CAR MEN ON POLE PROBLEM

Mayor James A. Fathers stated this morning that the question which the city commission is considering at the present time with regards to the plans for the ornamental street lighting system was how to arrange for the pole to support the wires of the traction company. A conference with the traction company will be held within the near future to arrive at a solution of the problem. If the company cannot secure a system of fastening their overhead wires to buildings, it will be necessary to have the street lights on brackets with the pole as a support to the wires or an extra set of poles for the wires. The city officials are anxious to have the light standards without brackets and power wires, and yet eliminate the extra poles.

JANESEVILLE DOLLARS WON'T GO TO BATTLE LOCAL BANKERS AVER

Allied Financiers Will Not Secure Any Help From Banks Here no Matter How Small.

No bank in Janesville will take part in the foreign loan, the allied belligerents are attempting to float, according to a canvas of Janesville banking institutions made today.

According to the local bankers, who do not extend their financial relations to the extent of participation in foreign business, it would be folly for them to offer their services to the warring countries under the interest at which, under present plans, the Allies want a billion dollars. Other investments far more sure and with the interest rate in excess of that offered in the present loan is possible and under the circumstances Janesville money will stay in Janesville.

Even though the Allies are successful in securing their loan, it is not expected that the result will have any effect whatever on local banks. While the general feeling seemed to prevail that eventually the loan would be made, either of the amount asked for or perhaps several millions or more under the amount, it was figured that the moneyed interests of such centers as Chicago and New York would take the entire amount. "Of course," said one banker, "it has been printed that the foreign commission in the United States to float the loan, would extend their efforts not only to the larger banking centers, but to every hamlet and town of the country, to secure the sum they desire, we cannot verify the truth of the newspaper articles. They may be, what is correct. One can easily see the moral effect. One can know that practically every portion of the United States was loaning them funds would only naturally feel that the sentiment of this country was with their cause, the forcing of Germany to her knees.

"Then again there must be considered the effect that such a loan, so gathered, would have on the industrial interests of this country. Of course under such circumstances the foreign nations would naturally look to us and become great purchasers of "Made In The U. S. A." products. It is said that the American financiers will stipulate, providing they loan the money, that the Allies must purchase here. This would stimulate business for the United States and force on a wave of prosperity throughout the land."

That some bankers, through sentiment, would participate in the loan was conceded. On the other hand, financiers could not help but be influenced by the feelings of the patriotic.

THE SECOND CHANCE.

The bored looking woman of thirty-five or thereabouts cast a half-animated, half-supercilious glance at the crowd on the deck of the excursion boat of which she was a physically jostled, mentally aloof unit. "And to think there was a time when I really liked this sort of thing," she mused, "a time when I was twenty-one or twenty-two, when Harry and I thought a little trip like this with a lunch on the beach and the sail back by moonlight was rather a lark. And a time before that—" her thoughts raced back still farther to the time when she had been an intense little youngster to whom pleasures like an excursion were rare enough to seem wonderful adventures—when it was something I would have looked forward to for weeks."

She Saw The Thin-Legged Little Girl That Was.

The woman's thirty-five or thereabouts looked out across the water without seeing the dancing white sails. There was a little mist of remissive tenderness in front of her eyes and she was seeing instead a thin-legged, brown-eyed, intense little youngster hanging over the railing of the boat until the by-standers held their breath; then she saw her astride the biggest horse of the flying horses making frantic lunges to catch the magic ring. And next she was sitting at a little table eating huge spoonfuls of pink ice-cream and swinging her thin legs under the table in the pure ecstasy of life and motion.

The mist of remissive tenderness became so thick that the lady performed it away what she was thinking. To endure this trip only because it is the easiest way to get where I'm going. "I'm bored, and so," she looked across at the man beside her who was reading his paper, "so is Harry. What wouldn't I give for some of the old intensity and the old happiness in little things? It doesn't seem fair that that should last so short a time and we should have to go on living so long afterwards. Seems as if we ought to have another chance at it."

They Didn't Want Any Children.

Suddenly the lady of thirty-five or thereabouts turned her head sharply to the right. Someone had said "Peter, be careful!" Now Peter was the lady's favorite name. She and Harry had never wanted children. They had decided long years ago that children tied you down too much and made you do too much. But now they had ever had a son his name would have been Peter. So the bored lady looked and said this is what she saw—a man and a woman about her own age and a fair-haired boy of seven or eight with an intense little face shining with happiness and two thin legs sticking sharply out behind as he knelt on the seat and leaned so far over the rail that the two big folks had to say "Peter, be careful."

This Time Life Talked To Her.

But they didn't say it crossly, these two. Instead, they smiled at each other across that thin little gap and the bored lady saw that smile—a queer feeling came into her heart. Then the calm looks brooked those two grown-ups, they looked very happy, not just as the child did, but in a sweet tender way. They were having another chance at happiness, not the ecstatic kind to be sure, but perhaps it made up in depth and tenderness for what it lacked in intensity.

The bored looking lady who had never wanted children turned suddenly away from Peter and the two who were happy with and through him. She had heard people talk before in fine generalities of what one missed by not having children. To-day she had heard life itself talk in concrete realities.

Glimpses of Married Life

BY MRS. EVA LIONARTE

"Give me a cup of tea and let me cool off a minute. I shall burst with laughing I haven't dared let out, and I want to tell you my story first so we can all laugh together." Olive sank into a chair in Nell's cozy sitting room where she and Jo Parsons were sewing.

"I'm afraid this isn't what you meant when you said it's been near the fire. What's your fun, please? Will you have lemon?"

"Yes, thanks. It's Mrs. Jaynes again. You really must go to that sewing soiree once in a while instead of sewing here by yourselves. It's too good. I went because I gathered that some of them have it in for me and I wanted to beard them in their lair. And I was rightly rewarded."

"We've held our breaths long enough," laughed Jo.

"It's Mrs. Jaynes again. Talk about you angel! She's worth three towns-full of common society women. And now some truly nice people there, too, for me to understand me. I don't go to make fun. Well, Mrs. Jaynes and Mrs. Stevens—they quit woman—are band in glove. The ladies ask Mrs. Jaynes to talk about the spiritual revival in Europe since the war—a timely topic, Mrs. Jaynes was got up regardless."

"Low neck and shoulder sleeves?" asked Nell.

"Not quite: brilliant peacock blue dress, deep décolletage, very short of course; silk stockings to match; waist covered with net and spangles; a band of jewels on her hair—she prettily calls it a tiara."

"What splendor!" chorused the audience.

"Well, that was the principal part of her address, as you're probably guessed. She talked in most rambling fashion of the dear brave French boys, no longer than her son Clyde—she used a perfectly dry handkerchief here—marching so

"Subject! She didn't say a word on or within a dozen miles of it, not one. Give me another cup of tea, please! I've earned three, at least. Oh yes!" Mrs. Jaynes also proposes Kermess—she explained that it's sort of European bazaar—to aid the poor Patriport at Christmas."

"Looks as if it might be some fun," suggested Jo. "I suppose she means the Italian laborers on the factory construction."

Heart and Home Problems

BY ELIZABETH THOMPSON

Letters May Be Addressed To Mrs. Thompson, in Care of The Gazette.

Dear Mrs. Thompson: I have been going with a young man for about six months. He has told my parents he intended to marry me, that I was the only girl he ever loved, and if I quit him he would never go with anyone else. I found out that he had lied to me when he asked me if he had. He knew it and said he couldn't help it. He had gone out with another girl, but he promised me that he wouldn't again. Then one night I caught him and hasn't seen him since.

I love him dearly and will never love anyone else. I hardly think I can give him up. Do you think it will be best? He makes a date with indecent girls in front of me, when he knows it almost breaks my heart. I have given up boys and girls for him and have been with neither since I started going with him. He runs around with all kinds of correspondence.

Is it good form for a girl to ask a boy to correspond?

Is it possible to make a boy like you? Do you think it is right for a boy and girl to kiss in fun or if they care for each other?

Is it proper for a boy of your own age to caress you in any way?

CURIOUS.

(1) The boy should start the correspondence.

(2) A girl should not ask a boy to correspond.

(3) By having such an attractive personality, he can't help it. A boy is almost sure not to like a girl if she shows that she wants him to.

(4) No. They should wait until they are engaged.

(5) No, not unless he is your brother.

to go riding in an automobile at night with two fellows if they know one of them?

(3) There is a certain young man with whom I should like to become acquainted. How can I do so without an introduction?

(1) Men haven't a reputation for hiding love when they feel it. Judge by the young man's actions and words, there is nothing more you can do.

(2) It is inevitable because it is apt to be dangerous.

(3) There is no respectable way.

WHAT NOW IS LEFT FOR MAN TO ENDURE?

Here Is a Winsome Young Bride of Milton Junction Who Issues Orders to Barber Who Cuts Her Husband's Hair.

Mere man is sure "up against it." The demands of the "weaker sex" and wife says she is the weaker in a sarcastic tone. For the right of the wife as they express it is becoming more and more of a handicap upon the men folk each day, and are even on the increase. One is not surprised nowadays when friend wife steps up to the cashier's desk Saturday night collects the wages, counts it over carefully to see that there has not been a single cent drawn out and then to cashier "I'm sorry, but we need a few dollars for carfare. When we get home we'll pay you back."

Today the average person is not at all surprised to see friend wife at the wheel of the big touring car or the classy roadster, while hubby sits in the nonchalant expression on his face, holding the baby. The clerk of the clothing store does not mind when today when he sees his wife, the male member of the household down to the store and sits him in a chair while she picks out his suit, choosing one of those stylish, freakish creations against his mild-yet-very-mild protests. When it comes to the neckties and wifey picks out a glorious red complexioned one, hubby shuns his mouth and grins just as if he liked it.

Over where one reads about the women taking the men's places while the men go off to war to fight for something at some place. Dispatches show that the women are filling the jobs so good that it is doubtful when the soldier ladies come marching home their jobs will be open to them. In fact, one has just to stand and consider front and back and then consider coming to the front. Yesterday a man used to laugh at the fair sex trying to play at sports. To think of a woman trying to shoot at traps, play baseball, be a good swimmer or diver, tennis expert, was to draw a laugh. But in these days every woman who looks anything like Venus from the face down, has no trouble getting a full length photograph in the metropolitan papers as a champion swimmer or diver. Any day she has a Kellerman suit on and the photo never shows her in the water. In Milwaukee they have women life savers and down in Chicago there is a pretty little Miss that shows more man how to swim. All these changes came about in time.

But the climax of the predominance of female over male comes from Union Junction. One would expect it, but nevertheless it is the truth. Recently a happy young bride took her mindful and dutiful husband down to the barbershop and gave instructions just how his hair should be cut and he sat there in the chair weekly, while wifey told the tonsorial artist to "obey" instructions. Think of it, having wifey going down to the barbershop and telling that conversation expert if you could shave your hair "with or without."

The man who put the word "obey" in the marriage vows never dreamed of the modern day effects of woman suffrage.

How Much Land There Is.

If all the land now above sea level, 25,000,000 cubic miles, were spread uniformly over the globe, it would form a shell about 660 feet thick.

"But her principal point was the difficulties getting out. I honestly never thought so hard not to laugh as when she told of some old American millionaire sitting all day in there on a fainting trying to get from Brussels to the coast. And bless your heart! he was knitting socks for the poor Belgians. Looked about for company and thought I saw one woman—wasn't there a Mrs. Burt? who looked as if she might be kindred spirit. But Mrs. Jaynes had tears in her voice, and the rest were solemn as a congress of owls."

THE GIRL WHO HAD NO GOD

By MARY ROBERTS RINEHART

Author of "The Man in Lower Ten," "The After House," Etc.

HILARY KINGSTON had been born in the village of Wellington for years. The eccentricity of his gray deer-hat, his beetling gray brows, his always fresh gray gloves, his sweet, rather heavy old figure, singled him out from the mass of commuters that thronged the city trains. The gray derby was a part of old Hilary. Except on those rare occasions when he attended services at St. Jude's he was never seen without it.

He lived in the hill above the village, with his daughter—had lived there for ten years. The Hall was beautiful, but old Hilary received no visitors, returned no advances. Visitors thought this curious. The villagers, prosperous business men with smart wives, shrugged their shoulders. The man's house was his own, if he found that he could do without it, the town or the town could get along without him.

There was no mystery about the hall, and little curiosity. Cars going into the country club passed under the brick walls of its Italian garden. Their occupants sometimes caught a glimpse of Elinor Kingston, there, reading in a rose arbor, wandering among her peonies and iris in the spring, cutting sprays of violets in midsummer.

The man thought her rainer-like, the woman odd, with her blind hair and dark eyes. The assistant rector of St. Jude's, new come to the village, met her face to face on one of his long country walks, a month or so before old Hilary's death, and could not forget her.

He led the conversation to her; that night at a dinner.

"An exquisite face," he described her. "She is most tragically sad," "Blond?" The lady at his right was a Mrs. Bryant. In honor of the new assistant rector, who came of the family and was a distinct acquisition to the village, she wore the Bryant pearl-shaped pearl. She spoke rather curiously. "I should not call her exquisite—but you probably met Elinor Kingston. Her sadness is a pose, I believe; she has everything—the works."

The assistant rector, whose name was Ward, said nothing. He was young, and very wise. So he spoke no more of Elinor until the women had left the table. Then he ventured again.

"Don't join the army of us who worship from afar," he advised the youth who had moved up beside him. "She's the loveliest thing in this part of the country. But, except our sainted rector, no one ever gets to put a foot on the place. It's exclusiveness, to the nth power, and then some. There's a lot of old folk, of course, or used to be. Old Kingston brings his servants from New York and except an elderly housekeeper none of them speak English." They used to say around here that he was a refugee, but that's all rot. He's a stately old dwarf, afraid some hand-some youth like myself will capture the girl. That's all, there's to it."

The assistant rector, whose name was Ward, said nothing. Instead, he turned to the gleaming table spread with flowers and candles, with the gay colors of cordials and liqueurs, was seeing a girl standing at the turn of a country road and gazing down into the valley and the distant ledge with somber eyes.

Faith, hope and charity, and the crest of these is faith. Faith in ourselves, faith in those around us, and that sublimest faith of all which leads to salvation. Something to all men is given such faith at the beginning of life, and some keep it to the end. But here and there is one who has lost it, who can not turn his eyes up and say "Lord, Lord." Old Hilary had not kept the faith.

Years ago he had not been evil. He had gone from philosophy into unbaptized, that route which all must travel. But unlike the many, he had not come back.

He had started with Socialism, but Socialism must be founded on the Christ and Him he scorned. So from Socialism he had drifted to anarchism, to the rich and give to the poor, at first. Later on, to rob the rich, to incite seditions, to arm the rebellious, it was comprehensive enough, easily wicked with that most terrible lawlessness of all, that believes itself law.

He had pitted his wits against the world and won—that had been old Hilary's creed. "For the oppressed" had been at first the slogan of the band he gathered around him. "Against the oppressor" it became later on. Very different the two. Most of human dignity and kindness lay crushed down and trampled underfoot during old Hilary's progress from Christ to Antichrist.

The band had been gathered with the care, responsibility, over determination—these spelled safety to old Hilary's astute mind. Most of them were younger sons of English landed families, with a sprinkling of other nationalities. Young Huff was an Australian, for instance, the son of a wealthy sheep-owner. Boroday the Russian—implicated in the bomb-throwing that destroyed the minister of war—was a nobleman, but during those early days when he righted what, to his crooked mind, were wrongs.

There were twelve in the band at the beginning, and for five years there were no changes. Then came the kidnapping and holding for ransom of Mackintosh the banker in Iowa, and the unexpected calling out of the State militia. The band had hidden Mackintosh in a deserted mine, and the band had been sent down in the shooting that followed his discovery. In the looting of Tiffany's vaults, which has never been published, a Frenchman named Dupres was killed; and only recently a tire had burst after the holding up of the car of the Governor of Delaware and their car, overturning, had broken the mechanism of the band and old Hilary's chauffeur. One way and another, the band only five left: Talbot and Lethbridge the Englishmen, Boroday, Huff and old Hilary himself. And old Hilary's hour was almost come.

Old Hilary lived well, as he might. His foreign servants were artists. He liked good food, good wines, good books. He even had a few pictures from the leading galleries of Europe. He hung them in the house at Wellington with a critical eye. "Safe place in the world," he said to old Henriette, who protested. The village has never even heard of them!"

And so in this atmosphere, with which he surrounded himself, of fine living and wrong thinking, of atheism raised almost to religion, of no man and no Christ, old Hilary had brought up his daughter. He had been proud of her; he was absolutely selfish, too. She had no other companion. He taught her to his unbelief, pointing out the churchgoers, as they drove together on Sunday morning, as slaves to a myth. Also, he taught her to hate a lie, and to drive aims. Early in her life their drives together had been punctuated with questions.

"But if my mother is dead, where is she?" asked Elinor on one of them. Old Hilary had evad her from under eyebrows that were already gray. "She lives in the memories of those that knew and loved her."

"But I never knew her. That's for me she doesn't live." But Mademoiselle—"she checked herself. Suspicion had been dawning in old Hilary's eyes.

"Death is the end," he said tersely, and called Dowin and Haecel to her. But at the end of the drive he interviewed Mademoiselle, and sent her flying to her chamber, where from under the carpet beneath her bureau, she got her rosary and wept over it.

Elinor was twenty the year her father died, a slender girl, born of flowers, rather a dreamer. Well educated, too. Old Hilary had seen to that; she knew Maito, Haecel, Bonham, Spofford, French and so on. Old Hilary had spent much time in Central America helping the insurgents; it was he who financed the insurrection in northern Mexico—and wrote fluently the form of shorthand that her father had devised as a means of communication between the leaders of the band. A keen-eyed, wistful-mouthed slip of a girl, shut off in the great house on the hill above Wellington, living her life on high theories and small duties, called for robbery and violent deeds, and viewing wistfully from her window the little children in the road below.

CHAPTER II.

ONCE a year the association closed its books. During all of the death Old Hilary had been arranging figures, collecting data in the cryptic shorthand she knew. Elinor had been smacking one young old Hilary's cheek clean, put it down and fastened his coat resolutely. It took courage.

"Mr. Kingston," he said, "the church needs men like you. Why be a Christian in the spirit—and avoid the letter?"

"Tut! Old Hilary rose and looked down at him. "I am like all gamblers. This annual check to your poor is the sop I throw to luck. That's all, sir."

And his tone closed the discussion. The word "gambler" worried the rector. He had thought it on his way down the hill to the rectory. But his poor were very poor. He cashed the check the next day.

Elinor was in the library, that sunny August day when they brought old Hilary to her. She had never seen death before, except on the streets of Mexico, and for a good many years he had been all she had—since her last governess, in fact, had been discovered secreting the rosary, and had been word-couraged from the house in tears. She faints and wrinkled Henriette laid her on a couch.

Boroday, the Russian, had brought the body home, and now he stood, looking down at Elinor and stroking his English-cut beard.

"He expected it, Henriette," he said. "He thought he would come sooner, in the Parker matter. I wonder—"

He glanced through the open door to the billiard-room where old Hilary's body lay on the table. He was minded, was Boroday, to wonder many things—whether, after all, old Hilary's dauntless spirit had gone out like a lamp, or if—

Elinor was at her father's right, still dressed. The dinners were always a trial to her. She was particularly anxious that the papers before old Hilary be in order and accurate. They were her work. The deeper significance of the meeting she was not so much ignorant of as profoundly indifferent to. If her father did a thing, it took an order, became law.

There were present Talbot and Lethbridge the Englishmen; Boroday whose escape from Siberia had made him old Hilary's friend; and young Huff, who was the mathematician. He had been trained in the Bleriot works; aeroplanes, wireless, automobiles to automatic pistols, he knew them—all makes, all grades. If old Hilary was the brains, Huff was the hands of the band.

He sat beside Elinor, watched her with worshipping eyes. Perhaps it was as well that old Hilary was intent on his food and on the business in hand.

The routine of the annual dinner seldom varied. Five of them then, their last dinner around the table, in evening clothes, well set up, spare, three of them young, all temperate, honorable about women—as polished, as harmless in appearance as death-dealing, as the gleaming projectiles of a twelve-inch gun!

It might have been the board meeting of some respectable bank he stood at the end of the table, and the light from the chandelier fell on him.

"I have to report, gentlemen," he would say, "a fairly successful year." This is where it differed from a bank. The association had no bad years. "While our expenses have

"Yet you weren't going to see Henry Craven?" murmured Toye.

Cazalet did not answer. His last words had come in a characteristic burst; now he had his mouth shut tight, and his eyes were fast to Scruton. He might have been in the witness-box already, a doomed wretch cynically supposed to be giving evidence on his own behalf, but actually only baring his neck by inches to the rope, under the joint persuasion of judge and counsel. But he had one friend by him still, one who had edged a little nearer in the pause.

"But you did see the man you went to see?" said Scruton.

Cazalet paused. "I don't know. Eventually somebody brushed past me in the dark. I did think then—but I can't swear to it even now!"

"Tell us about it."

"Do you mean that, Scruton? Do you insist on hearing all that happened? I'm not asking Toye; he can do as he likes. But you, Scruton—you've been through a lot, you know—you ought to have stopped in bed—do you really want this on top of all?"

"Go ahead," said Scruton. "I'll have a drink when you're done; somebody gave me a cigarette meanwhile."

Cazalet supplied the cigarette, struck a match, and held it with unflinching hand. The two men's eyes met strangely across the flame.

"I'll tell you all exactly what happened; you can believe me or not as you like. You won't forget that I knew every inch of the ground—except one altered bit that explained itself."

EXPECT CHAMPION WILLARD TO FIGHT BEFORE AGES MORE

Frank Moran and Jim Coffey Logical Heavyweights to Battle Big Jess For the Title.

By George R. Holmes.
New York, Sept. 21.—A heavy weight championship is in the ring. The recent assertion of Tom Jones, manager of Jess Willard, that his charge was ready to meet any heavyweight in the world, providing a sufficiently large space and a suitable place for the battle, could be arranged, was the first feeling. The second was the marching of Frank Moran, the Pittsburgh heavy, who recently returned from Paris, and Jim Coffey, the Irish mastodon, to do battle for ten rounds at the Garden on Oct. 19.

There is a whole lot of question as to whether these two men are actually eligible to meet the big Kansas Coffey, because of his size, gets a bid, and Moran has to be considered because he once gave Johnson a tough fight and because he is right now in his prime. Whether either of the men are capable of making things interesting for Willard is a matter that has as many sides as the who-started-the-war wheelbarrow.

Moran is cleverer with his two fist than Willard, a fact generally admitted. But so was Jack Johnson. Moran is handicapped by a comparatively short stature—at least compared with the giant Willard, and also he is outweighed by about 25 pounds, a monumental handicap in a long fight. Moran beat Bomber Wells, a man who while not a champion was considered one of the best in the division two years ago. And Wells is no dwarf. Willard's adherents claim that Jess could hold Moran off with his left arm and kill him with his right, which is hoisted by Moran supporters. One thing certain, however, Moran would have to fight better than he ever fought in his life to win the champion.

Coffey's size is his chief claim to fame. That is best, he would be Willard's equal or nearly so. And the big Irishman has improved all around in the last year.

The match at the Garden between this pair should be a bird. Each has something to fight for—a chance at the title if he wins, and that should be incentive enough to make them bat their heads off. Coffey's size is something by Moran's cleverness, and will not be any great advantage either way.

Mike Gibbons drew a laugh from the crowd watching him train for his bout with McFarland at Brighton. A friend of Mike's watching him duck the swings of Saller Burke, exclaimed:

"Mike, you're a wonder! You seem to go away from those haymakers by just throwing your head to one side and stopping the blow with your glove."

"Yes," drawled Mike, as he ducked under one of Burke's wild swings that would nearly have killed him, "and I've stopped a lot of them things with my face, too."

FOOTBALL CRITICS SAY
ST. LOUIS TEAMS ARE TURNED WRONG WAY

BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.

St. Louis, Sept. 21.—Too much tan-and-not-enough-mud-wallowing practice, too much attention to the giggly voices in the stand and not enough to the calling of the quarterback, kept Missouri University out of the running in the Missouri Valley conference last year, according to the best football authorities. The annual errors threaten to keep the university's slate black this year, if advance information is authentic. The school has never won a conference game in its entire association with the group. Nineteen fifteen will be no exception if it is predicted in circles abroad.

There are two other football teams in St. Louis. They are St. Louis university and Christian Brothers college. St. Louis university will play minor up-state colleges and universities with the exception of Georgetown and Arkansas, the two mid-west league opponents on the schedule. Christian Brothers' college, formerly famed for its football conquests, will have modified versions of the Christian Brothers' who were. Professionalism has been barred according to the announcement at the school and with it, disappeared the best local material. Captain Walter Essman will coach his own team, the three of last year's regulars including himself, to start with. The others are his brother, Charley and Harry Lynn. Times are dark at C. B. C.

Bill Edmunds, who won his letter at Michigan is in charge of Washington university's squad and with fourteen letter men as a nucleus and other experienced players among the freshmen, the team has a fair chance to predict a prosperous football year. Eight of his letter men were regulars last year. They include Gray, tackle; Meyer, center and Berry and Ransom, ends. Edmunds will have to develop an entire back-field. Last year backs were graduated, and the subs on that squad were considered poor seconds to the regulars.

Twelve letter men will return to St. Louis university. George Keegan, of Minnesota, will lead the squad.

Branch Rickey is trying to make the best of a bad year by trying out his young talent. Sisler is one youngster who does not have to worry over the future. He came in a finished product like Hal Chase.

PHILLIES AND RED SOX DRIVE NAILS IN PENNANT POLE

Boston Defeats Tigers Third Straight Time.—Phillies Gain in National.

—White Sox Beaten.

As the Boston Red Sox put the third straight knot into the Tigers' tail yesterday by the score of 3 to 2, and Pitcher Toney hurled Cincinnati to a 4 to 1 victory over the Atlanta Braves, it looks as though Philadelphia in the Boston Red Sox will line up for the major cutting in the world's series. The Tigers are now four full games behind, and they have been thoroughly whipped by the Boston gang. Pittsburgh, through Hans Wagner, shut out Brooklyn yesterday, 1 to 0, and the Dodgers and the Braves are five full games behind today.

Unless there is an unexpected turn-up in the last gasp of the pennant race, the world series will start on Friday, October 8th, according to President Ban Johnson. The American league season closes on Oct. 7, and the American league mogul sees no reason why the winner should not enter the classic fray the next day.

Yankees Beat Chicago.

New York, Sept. 21.—Charles Mullin, formerly a member of the White Sox, and released because he could not hit, beat the White Sox yesterday with a timely swat in the ninth inning, the Yankees winning by the count of 3 to 2. This gives the New Yorkers the series by three games to two. Eddie Cicotte was pitching for the Sox and was going along at a winning pace until the seventh inning when the knuckle ball expert was lambasted for two runs, which tied the score. King Cole was on the mound for the Yanks and was touched by the Sox for one in the first and again for one in the fourth. With the score two to two in the ninth, Cicotte scored on a wild hit and won the second. Mullin placed a drive that cinched the game. The Sox open at Washington today and will have to win one game of the series to keep from slipping from third place, as the Senators are but three and a half games behind them.

Cubs Sign Player.

Chicago, Sept. 21.—Today the Cubs play the Giants a double header as a package of six, kept the teams apart yesterday. Hippo Vaughn and Pierce are pitched to tie the match against the Giants. Ed Kelly, a player set adrift from the Pittsburgh Federal League club, has been signed for the Cubs. He played at short. McGraw is also busy assembling material for the 1916 grind, adding three new players to the Giant fold.

Hart Luck Cobb.

Boston, Mass., Sept. 21.—Turning the Detroit Tigers back for the third time, to 2, Monday, the Boston Red Sox today went into a lead of four games in the American league race.

Detroit's pennant prospects were dimmed before a crowd of 15,000, brought the total paid attendance for the four game series to 107,423, believed to be a record for any except world's title contests. Vice President Thomas R. Marshall was among the spectators. Detroit played an aggressive game.

The Tigers got men on bases, either on bases or hits and forced them along by means of bat or bursts of speed, but except in the first inning found Boston's fielders' barriers to progress beyond third base.

In the opening inning Ruth passed the first man and hit the next, and with Cobb's sacrifice and Venz's single the Tigers scored their only runs.

Ruth followed with a wild spell which forced his retirement, but Foster struck out Baker and the job was out. At other times during the game it was Hooper's bullet-like throws, Barry's handling of hard driven grounders, or catches by Speaker that stopped Detroit runners.

After getting a run in the first inning, Boston went scoreless against Davis' pitching until the sixth. Then a pass to Speaker led to a run when Lewis' drive bounded off Burns' shin into right field for a triple. When Lewis came in to the plate on Gardner's pinch, he was called safe, although Catcher Slanigan maintained that he had blocked him from the plate.

CARDINALS TO PLAY
WEST ENDS THIS WEEK

Janesville Nine With Strengthened Line-up to Meet Fast Chicago Aggregation Here Sunday.

With Ormsby pitching and Delaney catching, the Janevile Cardinals will resume the baseball tournament Sunday when they will play the fast Chicago West End team here. This announcement was received by telegram this morning from George Caidow, manager of the Cardinals from Chicago, where he is at present arranging for the complete schedule of games.

The batters for the West Ends will be Painter and Delava, pitchers and Kavanaugh catcher. The name of Knight is also to be brought to Janesville with Ormsby. The line-up of the Cardinals to oppose the Chicago team is uncertain but the infield will probably contain a new shortstop, with Lehman at first, Blake at second, and Kerman at third. Blake played with the Beloit Fairies Saturday and Sunday but will wear the Cardinals uniform here Sunday.

Football Spirit Of 1911 Is Again Revived at Princeton

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE]

Princeton, N. J., Sept. 20.—The football spirit of 1911 has been revived at Princeton. Speedy Rush has been welcomed as only a coach who has the entire confidence of his student body can be welcomed. His task is to develop an entirely new team.

With William Griff as the center of his offense, a Tiger coach can assemble Moosie, Law, Charles Dickerman, Driggs, Tibbott, Ames, Boland, and Eberstadt of last year's Varsity and Blake, Young, Goodspeed, and King of the freshman.

The most promising candidates for the end positions are Highly, Stea, A. Brown, and A. Wilson, brother of the Yale captain. To fill up the holes left by Ballin and Balger Coach Rush will have second string tackles Love, McLean, and Lawson, and Kaufman and Law of the freshman squad.

For the guard positions Peter, Roger, Lawrence, all of whom have had Varsity experience, together with Halsey and Warden, former hill school players, are leading candidates.

Nourse, center of two years ago, is again eligible, but he will have to beat Haaren and Breslin of the sophomore class for his old place.

Captain Clegg.

MORRIS MILLER

Melville Gallia's brilliant work this season brings to mind a little incident which happened during the season of 1913, or shortly after Nick Altrock joined the Nats. Altrock at that time begged "Grif" to buy Gallia from the Kansas City club, saying,

"I'll stake my reputation on this young fellow. There's nobody else I'd like to have." Gallia won't be one of the sweetest pitchers in the American league just as soon as he gets a little experience."

We don't know whether it will help the country's preparedness to any large extent, but the fact is worth mentioning that the country now has a regular flyweight champion—the first it's ever had, too. The person is Young Zulu Kid, of St. Louis. Zulu is a 112-pounder, and has been whipping boys who outweighed him from four to ten pounds. He has never been whipped by any one his own weight.

The more one sees of that Cleveland team the stronger grows the belief that in the next campaign the Indians are apt to be decidedly more prominent than it has been this year. There appears to be a wealth of good material on the roster over which Lee Pohl presides, and just as soon as it is determined how this can be used to the best advantage good results are sure to be attained. It is now a fairly good hitting team, which gives every reason for being put down as being improved for next season, for it has a lot of young players who are just coming. That pitching staff of the Indians is not to be sneezed at, for there appears to be a lot of strength there, and it ought to show marked improvement by next season.

Edgerton Council Instructs Committee to Investigate Conditions Responsible for Creek's Overflow.

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE]

Edgerton, Sept. 21.—The city council met last night in regular session and the recent flood conditions were generally discussed. Attorney Grubb discussed the subject from the view that something should be done to prevent a recurrence of the recent conditions which existed. W. G. It was decided to discontinue the traffic across Sauder's creek at the bridge on Swift street, and to construct a temporary foot bridge, as the bridge is now considered unsafe for travel and to await the findings of the street and bridge committee when they consult with Mr. Wheeler in regard to strengthening the creek.

Dresden, Sept. 21.—In the exhibition of "war atrocities" that has been opened in Dresden, showing the way in which the popularity of German leaders is being exploited for trade purposes, General Von Hindenburg is the chief victim, his portrait being shown on scores of candy boxes, cigar cases, ash trays, mustard pots, pocket handkerchiefs and even ornaments. ARKANSAS CITY, KAN., Sept. 21.
This city is the principal point of the youngest oil territory in the Mid-Continent field and oil men from all parts to this section are swarming in.

The excitement started when a test on what is known as the Alberti place developed a thousand barrel production at 3400 feet with only six feet of the pay sand penetrated. No sooner did Alberti well show this big production, the rigs began to go up on all sides and rates for further productions are now going up eight.

An electric light plant has been constructed on the landscape for several miles around at night sparkles with electrical equipment.

The flow of oil at the Alberti has been so strong since the well was brought in that the drillers have not risked trying to take the tools out or to go at a point deeper in the sand. It is considered remarkable for the flow at so shallow a puncture of the sand.
